Our commitment to diversity.

businesses across the country. To do this effectively, it's vital that we build teams that reflect Technology is changing the way we interact with the world. The rapid adoption of smartphones, wearables, and other connected devices is only the beginning. Soon, everything from traffic lights, machines, and driverless cars will all be connected. The networks that will support these new innovations are driven by our portfolio of towers, small cells, and fiber. To continue building and maintaining this infrastructure, we need the help of a diverse network of suppliers and contractors. They work with our employees to help our customers utilize our assets in a way that brings the world's biggest ideas and possibilities to the people and businesses who need them.

We have a dedicated Supplier Diversity team that works as a strong advocate for our diverse supplier partners and facilitates introductions to decision makers at our offices around the country.

First and foremost, we look to partner with companies that are customer-focused and share our commitment to honesty, accountability, partnership and integrity. We also require that our diverse supplier partners are certified by a third party.
